Research Interests

Dr. R. S. Singh is well experienced in protein and carbohydrate biotechnology, which includes industrial enzymes from microbial sources, microbial exopolysaccharides and microbial lectins. The major aims of my laboratory are to develop processes for the production and purification of industrial enzymes & microbial exopolysaccharides and their applications in food & fermentation industry. Microbial lectins after purification and characterization are evaluated for their mitogenic & therapeutic potentials. Applications of all these biomolecules in food and pharmaceutical industry are undertaken. We are also exploiting molecular biology and bioprocessing approaches for enhancing the efficiency of various food enzymes such as aspartase, rhamnosidase, inulinases, etc.
